THE AGENCY DRUG ABUSE EXHIBIT ON DISPLAY IN THE HEADQUARTERS BUILDING

1. Many employees have seen the Agency Drug Abuse Exhibit now on display in the corridor next to the main entrance hall of the Headquarters Building. This exhibit, which portrays the medical effects of depressants, stimulants, narcotics, and hallucinogens, recently was awarded the Billings Gold Medal while on display at the annual convention of the American Medical Association in San Francisco. The Billings Gold Medal is one of the two top awards given annually at the convention and is presented for the exhibit judged first in excellence of factual correlation and in excellence of presentation. The response of convention visitors to the exhibit was overwhelmingly favorable. Numerous invitations were received during the convention to show the exhibit at other professional meetings.

2. The exhibit's message is vitally important to us all. For the benefit of those employees who have not yet seen the exhibit, it will remain on display in the Headquarters Building through Friday, 28 July.
